WOMEN'S HUMAN RIGHTS – GENDER EQUALITY, CITIZENSHIP AND NON – DISCRIMINATION IN THE 21th CENTURY
RESUMO DO SIMPÓSIO / SYMPOSIUM SUMMARY
It is a fact to see that gender inequality meets a set of requirements fundamental to determining a country's wealth. Those countries where gender discrimination is prohibited are the richest ones, giving examples of equal opportunities among men and women (50/50), both in the job market and family roles. Therefore it is statistically significant that the participation of women in the various roles (professional, wife, mother, and educator) promotes social well-being and contributes to the economic and political stability of the countries. To solve the crisis that resulted from the Covid-19 pandemic, international laws and strategic plans are not enough. Alternatives will have to be created, reinforcing institutional mechanisms to establish the effective integration of women in positions equal to men, without discrimination in wage, motivation, and productivity.
